When this happens, there are many entries in the database table for the user with same email and password (I understand this is normal because the session is referenced to the email id of the user. I would like a way to say that if the email and password have changed from the last entry for this user, create only one entry. So that the link to the user is only updated once. A: I think you should take a look at the link I created in the comments, which is much more elegant than what you are looking for. You should also check out how sharding is done in the devise gem and maybe adjust your Rails project for a more elegant way of doing things. Etiology of lymphocytic hypophysitis. Lymphocytic hypophysitis (LH) is a rare inflammatory disorder of the pituitary gland characterized by infiltration of the gland with mature small lymphocytes. Although most patients are women between the ages of 30 and 60 years, LH has also been described in other age groups and in men. The etiology of LH remains to be elucidated. However, autoimmune, drug-induced, and infectious causes have all been proposed. The purpose of this study was to further elucidate the etiology of LH. Through immunohistochemical (IHC) stains, we have demonstrated the presence of CD20+ cells that are negative for pituitary hormones in eight biopsy specimens of the anterior pituitary from eight patients with LH. Single-center retrospective chart review. Case series from tertiary referral center. All of eight patients presented with acute or subacute onset of symptomatic hyperprolactinemia. LH was diagnosed on the basis of compatible imaging findings and biopsy findings. Immunohistochemical staining for CD20 showed a predominant infiltrate of small CD20+ B lymphocytes. In all of eight cases, T-cell populations were absent. No evidence of coexisting lymphocytic adenohypophysitis or lymphoproliferative disorder was identified. Whereas the majority of pituitary lymphocytic infiltr
