The Mushroom Girl Released in Japan on September 25, 1999, Mushroom Girl X (XMush) was the first "twin" (i.e., related) developed by Wild Grunt. Gameplay The game mechanics are similar to those found in many fighting games. The player progresses by defeating various monsters in a variety of battle situations. The game's plot features the player fighting through 8 "levels" (actually worlds) in search of a princess to save. The main goals of the game are to fight different bosses, collect their respective artifacts, obtain the essence of the bosses, and escape. Combat The "boss fight" phase of the game is when the player encounters the most difficult of the game's monsters. In this phase, the player can choose to fight either on the ground or from the air. There is one "boss fight" for each of the 8 worlds. Each boss fight lasts about 10 to 15 seconds. It is necessary to defeat the bosses in order to progress in the game. Once the player defeats the boss, the enemy will be subjected to a special effect called the "Hue." The Hue differs from world to world. The first boss gives the player a view of the Hue when the monster is defeated. After defeating all the bosses, the player gets to see the Hue for each of the boss artifacts. The Hue and the boss's names appear only when the player defeats the boss. Story There are 8 worlds in Mushroom Girl X. The game starts in World 1. Each world corresponds to a specific boss's "artifact." The player starts off with a fairly basic power-up that increases by getting more artifacts. World 1: First boss is lo luchí (ロロ). The Hue is "Pink." Players must fight lo luchí twice. World 2: Second boss is Kinchou (キン). The Hue is "Purple." Players must fight the Boss twice. World 3: Third boss is Ame (ア). The Hue is "Red." Players must fight Ame once. World 4: Fourth boss is Big le (ビッグ). The Hue is "Yellow." Players must fight the Boss twice. World 5: Fifth boss is Sera (セラ). The Hue is "Blue."
