* Figure 5-8 shows the program's new features in the CS6 version. This figure shows the Layer panel and the new tools that are easy to use and are designed for beginners. * Refer to Chapter 3 for an overview of the Photoshop workspace. * See Chapter 18 for more on using layers. * See the tutorial in Chapter 7 to learn how to create and work with adjustment layers. * See Chapter 8 for more about Smart Objects and layers. Figure 5-8: The new features of Photoshop CS6's editing system make it much easier for beginners. The new features in Figure 5-8 include the following: * The new Pencil tool. It allows you to draw lines and select a rectangular or freeform area to activate the selection tools. This tool also gives you a drawing perspective, similar to an airbrush. * The new layer masking tools, including a Healing Brush, which repaints an area based on an existing layer mask. * The new Content-Aware Fill and Spot Healing Brush tools are a more automated way to fix image problems. * The new Reflection feature lets you create a layer mask that contains a reflection of the source image — for example, for a retro-style image. Layers Photoshop's Editing System enables you to use layers to organize and manage changes to an image. _Layers_ are a way of recording all of your changes to an image with different types of work or in different states. You can apply different effects to a layer, such as filters, effects, and even adjust the opacity of a layer so that its changes are less noticeable. You can group the layers that work together for different applications. Photoshop CS6's System of Layers Layers are a more user-friendly way to manage your image-editing projects because they enable you to apply a number of changes to one image at a time. You can create and manipulate your work in layers; for example, to use a favorite technique and then save changes to the individual layer. You can arrange the layers in the following ways: * In a single image * In separate documents * In a single photo shot and in separate documents * When you use multiple documents to work with an image Layers enable you to view the stack history — the states or layers that you have saved and applied to an image — and

Both the production of islet-cell antibodies and an autoimmune islet cell diabetes could result from immunologic damage or from failure of islet cell regeneration. Islet-cell antibodies might also be present in healthy subjects without an islet cell antibody syndrome or diabetes. We measured the prevalence of islet-cell antibodies in 361 normal subjects, 20 patients with non-insulin-dependent diabetes mellitus (NIDDM), and five patients with latent autoimmune diabetes in adults (LADA) in an unselected population of healthy blood donors. The normal subjects had islet-cell antibodies in only 1.4% (seven of 495 donors) of whom two had type 1 diabetes mellitus and one had a history of pancreas transplantation. Among the NIDDM patients, in whom 31% had islet-cell antibodies, only one had type 1 diabetes mellitus and one had a history of pancreas transplantation. None of the LADA patients tested had islet-cell antibodies. Because the antibodies were present in only 1 of 23 normal subjects, it seems unlikely that the antibodies observed in normal subjects and in patients with NIDDM are an epiphenomenon of islet cell regeneration. However, we could not rule out the possibility of the presence of islet-cell antibodies among individuals with normal glucose tolerance because of their low prevalence. In addition, our data cannot exclude the possibility that islet-cell antibodies are common in the population because of the cross-reaction with antibodies to human insulin. Comparison of the risk of transplant lymphoproliferative disease between anti-donor HLA-specific and non-HLA-specific anti-HLA donor-specific antibodies. Anti-donor HLA-specific antibodies (ADSA) and non-HLA-specific antibodies (N-NSA) have been shown to be the strongest predictors for the development of de novo acute rejection (DR-ADR) and recurrent acute rejection (DNR-AR) after kidney transplantation (KT). The role of ADSA in transplant lymphoproliferative disease (PTLD) remains unclear. We compared the risk of PTLD after KT between kidney transplant recipients who developed ADSA after KT (ADSA KTx patients) with those who did not (Non-ADSA KTx patients) to clarify the risk of PTLD due to ADSA in KTx patients. ADSA KTx patients had a significantly higher risk of developing PTLD than Non-ADSA KTx patients (39.7 vs. 2.6 per 100 person-years; p<.001).
